SUMMER'S ARRIVED!

June is a big turning point in regards to Scottish produce. We are beginning to leave behind a lot of the heavy root veg of winter and are moving towards a bounty of fresh, green produce.

Across northern Europe, countries like the Netherlands, are beginning to grow a lot more summer produce (tomatoes, courgettes, aubergines), meaning supply chains are getting shorter. This is also the case closer to home, due to our northern latitude, our growing season starts even later than England.

But good things come to those who wait, a patience rewarded by the arrival of the succulent Scottish Strawberries that we have paid homage to on this month's cover. Our latitude means a slow ripening process, allowing the sugars to build up slowly and develop a flavour that imports can't match.

FRUIT

Strawberries
Raspberries
Rhubarb
